The Story of The Inauguration

Thursday, October 20th, was truly an auspicious occasion in the annals of Wesleyan College, just as an editorial in The Macon Telegraph said it would be. On that date, Dr. William Earl Strickland was formally inaugurated as the nineteenth president of Wesleyan.

An academic procession of more than 150 personages marched into the Porter Family Memorial Auditorium for the formal exercises Thursday. Included were college presidents and delegates, representatives of learned associations, trustees, faculty, and student representatives—all paying tribute to our new president. And walking alone at the end of the impressive procession was Dr. Strickland. Directly in front of him were two recently appointed bishops of The Methodist Church: Bishop James Walton Henley of the Jacksonville Area, and Bishop John Owen Smith of the Atlanta Area.

Dr. Samuel L. Akers, chaplain and former dean of Wesleyan, delivered the invocation and prayer before the capacity audience in the auditorium. Special music was provided by Doris Onderdonk Jelks at the organ and the Chapel Choir under the direction of Miss Sylvia Ross.

Two Bishops on Program

Bishop Henley presided and paid tribute to Dr. Strickland as a man who commanded admiration and respect, a man to whom "along with our esteem and love, we bring our love and sympathy."

Bishop Smith, speaking on "Re-thinking Our Patriotism", reminded faculty and students of the vital importance of taking the formative mind and developing it to the fullest extent. He warned all of his listeners that Russia had boasted of her intention to "out-educate, out-research, out-produce, and out-plan America."

The Christian college seeks to give to its graduates something inside to rely on besides aspirin and tranquilizers in these troubled times, he pointed out. Such a person, one who "believes", will not wind up in frustration and defeat, he stated. In conclusion, he urged his audience to re-think their position, to re-shape their philosophy of money, and to show Russia that "we are in this thing, too".

Dedication and Inductive Services

An inspiring dedication service was read by Bishop Henley with Dr. Strickland answering solemnly at intervals "With God's Help, I will". Again the high ideals of a Christian college and the great responsibilities of its president were stressed. The Bishop reminded Dr. Strickland that as president he "must be a challenging example of the noblest culture, the finest scholarship, and the highest wisdom."

Then Leo Bennett Huckabee, chairman of the Board of Trustees, presented Wesleyan's charter of 1836 to Dr. Strickland as a symbol of his official induction as president of the college. Dr. Strickland responded in his inaugural address which is printed elsewhere in this issue.

In expressing the purpose of Wesleyan, he quoted the Preamble to the By-Laws of the College: "Wesleyan College is dedicated to the Service of God and the making of Christian womanhood." After speaking of the ideals for which Wesleyan has stood throughout its long history, he committed himself to sincere service as president.

After the singing of the Alma Mater, the President led the Academic recessional to the strains of appropriate organ music. On the steps outside the auditorium, he paused to receive congratulations from many of the visitors and alumnae.

President's Luncheon

Trustees, college representatives and guests were honored at the president's luncheon in the dining hall. C. Baxter Jones, trustee, presided and introduced special guests.

Seated at the head table were: Mrs.

C. C. Hinton, chairman of the Inauguration Committee; Bishop and Mrs. Henley; Bishop and Mrs. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. Leo B. Huckabee; Dr. and Mrs. Strickland; and Mr. and Mrs. C. Baxter Jones.

Also introduced were the delegates sent by other colleges and universities to take part in the inaugural exercises. Trustees, faculty members, and students served as hosts and hostesses for the luncheon.

Students Are Included in Activities

Wesleyan students were represented during the inaugural events by the presidents of the "Big Four" and the classes, and two elected representatives of each class. In addition, 24 other outstanding students were asked to serve as marshalls and ushers. During the morning, a few students and faculty members served as a special hospitality committee. Invitations to the inaugural had been sent to each student and to the parents of all students.

Board of Trustees Meet

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees was held on Thursday afternoon while busy alumnae put the finishing touches on the elaborate plans for the formal reception to honor President and Mrs. Strickland that evening.

Formal Reception Held

What was probably the largest crowd ever to attend a single event at Wesleyan came to the reception. The parlors and student lounge of the Olive Swann Porter Building were crowded with people to meet the receiving line which was in the lovely dining hall. All in all, it was a fitting climax for an outstanding day in the history of Wesleyan.

The Inaugural Address

Dr. Strickland Stresses Ideals of Wesleyan

Bishop Henley, Bishop Smith, Mr. Huckabee, Friends:

At this moment I am acutely aware of the high honor and the awesome responsibility that is conferred upon me as I publicly assume the office of President of Wesleyan College. In this act I proudly associate myself with the history and traditions of the College. I affirm my confidence in the College as it faces the future. And I humbly pledge myself in the days ahead to a wholehearted effort to render effective service as President.

History of Wesleyan

Nearly a hundred and twenty-five years ago a group of devout and learned men founded this College. They were agents of The Methodist Church, but they brought the institution to the City of Macon at the urgent request of the City's leading citizens. And the charter which they secured from the legislature of the State of Georgia was granted more easily than might otherwise have been the case because for several years a few prominent legislators had urged the State to make some provision for an institution of higher education for women. In a territory that was still pioneer land, Wesleyan College arose as a monument to the vision and faith of men and women who were willing to make a pioneering adventure in education.

Eighteen men have preceded me in the task of the presidency of the College. They were able men, each as able as his own day and age could afford. Collectively and each in his own individual way, they gave the College a program and a character. But they did not work alone. They administered the policies of a Board of Trustees, the membership of which over one and a quarter centuries provides a list of as great citizens as the States of Georgia and Florida have produced—for when the Methodist Church developed in Florida out of Georgia Methodism it came into being owning an interest in Wesleyan. Over the years, hundreds of dedicated faculty members and thousands of students gave the College its day to day characteristics.

As I study the history of the College I am impressed by the fact that over so great a span of time, with changing boards, succeeding administrations, and highly changeable faculty and student body, the College has had its own personality. With remarkable singularity, it has pursued a set of ideals that time has not altered. Curricula have been changed, methods and techniques have followed the trends of the times, facilities have been added, a whole new campus in fact has been developed, but the fundamental goals and principles have endured with persistent vigor of expression and direction. I should like to lift up for your remembrance three of the ideals that have led the College since its inception. It was these ideals, or at least my understanding of them, that made Wesleyan an institution with which I was proud to become associated.

Higher Education for Women

Mention first the ideal of higher education for women. College and university education for women is taken so for granted in America today that it is difficult for most of us to imagine what a novel proposition it was in the year 1836 when Wesleyan was chartered. A number of institutions existed which offered a more elementary type of education for those of the female sex. But otherwise rational and intelligent men argued that women were physically and mentally too weak for higher education. They argued vehemently that college education for women was incompatible with their role in life as wives and home-makers. Literacy and some mastery of the domestic arts, it was almost universally agreed, was all the education women needed or indeed were capable of attaining.

Perhaps it would be well to remind ourselves of the status of women in 1836. Since women were considered incapable of college education, they naturally were considered incompetent to participate in government. It was thirty-four years later, in 1870, that the first vote in a political election was cast by an American woman. In that instance the vote was cast in an election in the territory of Wyoming twenty years before Wyoming was admitted to the Union. In England where great universities had nourished the search for truth over many centuries it was not until 1918 that women were granted full voting privileges. And it was two years later, in 1920, that the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States was passed guaranteeing the right to vote regardless of sex. That was eighty-four years after the chartering of Wesleyan. And when women became eligible to vote they had had for relatively few years, either in England or America, equal rights with men to own and to dispose of property.

The Charter of Wesleyan College, or Georgia Female College, as it was called at first, which was adopted by the Legislature of the State of Georgia in December of 1836 said, among other things, "Paragraph 9. And be it further enacted, That the President of the College, by, and with the consent of the Trustees, shall have power to confer all such honors, degrees, and licenses, as are usually conferred in colleges or universities . . ." From the very beginning, then, Wesleyan was projected with the expressed idea of providing for women "a college education equal to any afforded the opposite sex." (Quoted from the preamble of the By-Laws of the College). It is a matter of record that this was the first instance in history of an institution deliberately chartered for the purpose of offering a college-level education for women.

Equal Rights for Women

The ideal of higher education for women has been a guiding ideal for Wesleyan through all the years of its existence and continues so to be. Women long ago proved their ability, not only for college education, but also for graduate work and for research. They have demonstrated their competence for training in the professions. They have become an indispensable part of the business life of America, not only as secretaries but also as managers, stockholders, and entrepreneurs. They share a role equal to that of men in the sphere of fine arts. In government, more and more women are running successfully for high public office, and in the year 1960 there are over three million more women of voting age in the United States than there are men of voting age. All the arguments that ever were valid for the education of wives and mothers have become increasingly cogent with the increasing leadership of home-makers in community affairs.

Let it be understood that Wesleyan has no wish to dispute the merits either of college and universities for men or of coeducational institutions. Many valid arguments may be adduced in favor of coeducation at all levels. I am sure, however, that many would agree with my conviction that the total program of higher education in America would be impoverished greatly were there no colleges for women as typified by Wesleyan. Time does not permit an exhaustive analysis of that conviction. I should like, however, to mention two points.

First, the fact that everyone now concedes both that women have an equal right to a college education, and that they have equal abilities does not mean that ideally the college education offered to men and to women should be identical. Is college education primarily a terminal experience of formal education? Is it primarily a preparation for graduate studies? Is it primarily a foundation for training in a profession? Should it be primarily a "liberal arts" education or should it be a direct training for occupational skills? Is college education primarily a search for knowledge, or is it equally a search for self-understanding? Is college education a mastery of technique, or is it the discovery of goals? I believe that the very asking of such pertinent questions points to the conclusion that while great numbers of men and women may have identical needs with regard to college education it is impracticable to devise a unitary type of college education that would suit equally well the needs of all people, to say nothing of suiting equally well the needs of men and of women. A college like Wesleyan ought to be able to provide an education that is equal to any college education for men that is also particularly appropriate to the needs of women.

Small College Has Merit

The second point I wish to mention is that colleges attempting to be all things to all students inevitably must be very large institutions or must offer a very thin program to its students. I believe very strongly in the merits of a reasonably small college that does an excellent job of what it attempts rather than attempting to do too many things. The possibilities for a unified approach to knowledge and truth is much greater where student body and faculty are reasonably small than in a tremendous institution where the separate schools and faculties have few points of contact. This is particularly true at the college level where the emphasis need not be at the point of elaborate facilities for research but should be at the point of student-faculty relations. Ideally the woman's college should have at least the possibility of being small enough in size yet specific enough in purpose to be able to do superbly what it needs to do.

High Quality Education

Let us turn now to a second ideal that has been prominent at Wesleyan throughout the history of the college—the ideal of high quality education. I am sure that no one at Wesleyan would wish to make extravagant claims in her behalf. If, however, one of the constituents of greatness is the steadfast holding to an ideal of greatness then Wesleyan has much to her credit at this point. It was no easy matter in 1836 to build a quality college for women. It would not have been easy anywhere in the world, and it had special difficulties in predominantly rural Georgia. Adequate facilities were not the only problem. The elementary and secondary education then provided girls in the South made it difficult for them to enter college-level work immediately. Because of the problem the college was forced to try to do more than most colleges for it had to carry on a college program while trying to make up for deficiencies in previous training at the same time. All the problems were faced realistically by the college administration, but they were never allowed to dim the vision of top quality college education.

It was not easy during the Civil War and the long hard years that followed to operate in the South a high quality college for men or women. But during that time Wesleyan acknowledged no other aim. It was not easy during the great depression in the 1930's to maintain high quality standards in the colleges of this country. Wesleyan particularly was hit hard by the depression since in the pursuit of higher quality it had gone heavily in debt to develop a completely new and beautiful campus. But even the depression brought no compromise of ideals.

Excellence and Quality

Excellence does not consist merely in a favorable comparison with someone else. I believe that Wesleyan College is entitled to some measure of reputation for greatness if for no other reason than that for nearly a hundred and twenty-five years she consistently has held before her students, faculty, and friends the ideal of quality. Alfred North Whitehead wrote in The Aims of Education: "Moral education is impossible apart from the habitual vision of greatness." Institutions, like individuals, need the vision of greatness.

Can the quality of an education be measured, weighed or counted by the physical means which a college has at its disposal? Can well-built campuses, well-stocked libraries, modern laboratories, or even high faculty salaries guarantee excellence? Of course, I agree with the accrediting agencies that a certain minimum ought to be expected of a college with respect to its physical facilities. But we Americans have become oriented toward materialism sufficiently that we easily fall into the trap of confusing quantity with quality and information with wisdom. Wesleyan has a beautiful campus, two hundred and fifty acres of land and many well-built and beautiful buildings. That is an advantage, nothing more. Wesleyan has many urgent needs in buildings and equipment. That is a challenge, nothing more.

In what does quality reside? I frequently hear parents ask about which is a "good" college, or a "better" college, or the "best" college. Obviously, such questions cannot be answered, if at all, until the one asking knows the answers first of all to the question: good for what? Colleges can be compared in various ways: by uniform testing, or by the records of graduates in gra-

Alumnae Honor The First Family at Reception

Wesleyan alumnae can well be proud of the careful planning and hours of work that went into making the inaugural reception one of the loveliest affairs ever held at our college.

Virginia McClellan McCowen, our national president, and Elsie Lowden Maxwell, president of the Macon alumnae, worked together to coordinate the efforts of countless alumnae. Emma Drew Clay served as chairman of the decorations committee.

The large crowd was handled beautifully as the entire downstairs area of the Olive Swann Porter Building was thrown open and decorated for the occasion. Purple satin tablecloths (made by Macon alumnae) graced the eight serving tables. Silver punch bowls, candelabra, and flower arrangements in our colors completed the picture.

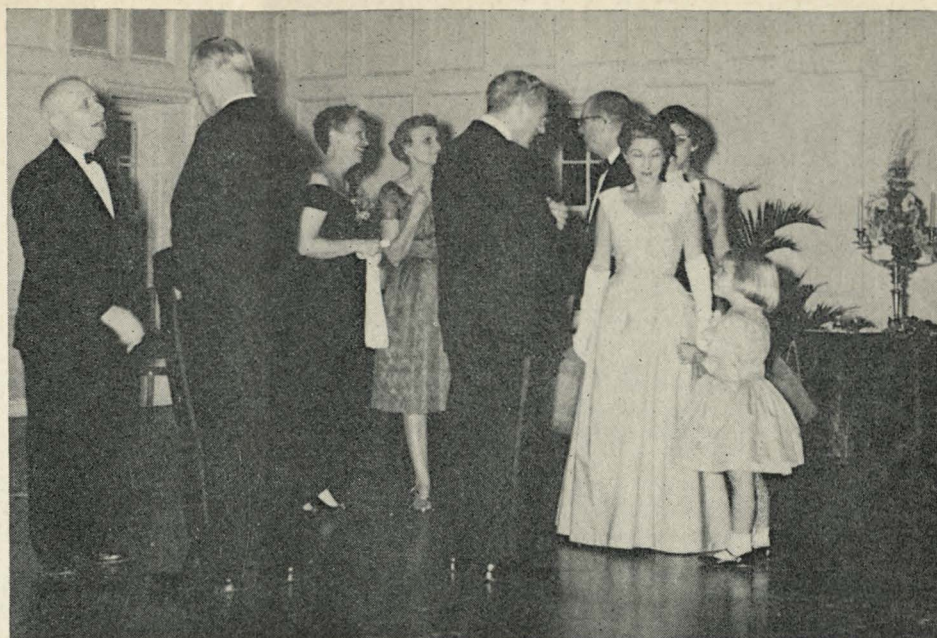

Macon trustees and their wives assisted alumnae in receiving informally in the foyer, the Burden parlor, and the student lounge. The formal receiving line held sway in the Anderson dining hall with all guests having an opportunity to meet Dr. and Mrs. Strickland, Virginia McCowen and her husband, Bishop and Mrs. James Walton Henley, Bishop and Mrs. John Owen Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Huckabee, and Mrs. C. C. Hinton who was general chairman for the inauguration.

Unusual refreshments arranged by Mrs. Hurst, the college dietician, added the final touch to a perfect evening. To the many alumnae who assisted in countless ways, the entire Wesleyan Alumnae Association offers sincere thanks for a job superbly done.

In acknowledging publicly the importance of the inauguration, The Macon Telegraph stated: "The ceremonies also are important to this community, which has a special place in its heart for Wesleyan, and for alumnae and friends around the world."

It is for those alumnae and friends, so many of whom were unable to be with us for our all-important day, that this brief account has been presented. We wish you could have shared the experience with us.

Honor Guests talking informally after the reception are joined by little Margaret Strickland.

Two New Trustees Elected at Fall Meeting

Mrs. Fred Manget of Newnan and Macon, and Mr. Randolph Thrower of Atlanta were named new members of the Wesleyan Board of Trustees at the annual meeting on October 20th.

Mrs. Manget (Jennie Loyall) needs no introduction to Wesleyannes. She was the first Alumnae Director and served in that capacity from 1924-1947. She received the Alumnae Award for Distinguished Service in 1953, and was Benefactor's Day speaker on one occasion.

A loyal and generous benefactor of Wesleyan, Jennie is beloved by Alumnae all over the world. She has served as vice-president and trustee of the American Alumni Council and as the first secretary of the Georgia Division of the AAUW. She was a member of the Executive Committee of the Wesleyan Foundation. She is a member of the Board of Managers and is chairman of the Alumnae Bequest Committee which was established during the Centennial of the Wesleyan Alumnae Association in 1959. Her background of experience and wisdom is so broad that the Alumnae Association has constantly been inspired and guided by her able assistance before and since she left the Alumnae Office. We are happy indeed that Jennie will be working with our Board of Trustees.

Mr. Thrower, prominent Atlanta attorney, is the husband of Margaret Munroe, class of 1935. He is a graduate of Mercer University Law School, and has been active in community affairs.

Our Wesleyan 1961

The Success of Our Loyalty Fund Depends on You!

Your contribution is needed if our Loyalty Fund is to be a success! Last year 333 new names were added to our Honor Roll. This year we want to again increase the percentage of alumnae who give.

If you have not already sent your contribution during the first four months, here is a calendar to remind you daily of your obligation to Wesleyan. If you are already on our Honor Roll, use this calendar to remind you of the many happy memories of your days at Wesleyan.

May these last 8 months of our fiscal year bring great happiness and success to each of you.

Dr. Wm. F. Quillian, Beloved Former President, Dies

Wesleyan suffered a great loss when Dr. William F. Quillian, former president, president emeritus, and trustee emeritus, died in Atlanta on October 26 at the age of 79.

Dr. Quillian served first as president from 1920-1931 and again as acting president from 1951-1953. During his first administration, the new campus was purchased, 13 buildings were erected, and both faculty and student body doubled in size.

Wesleyan Alumnae will be forever indebted to Dr. Quillian for the establishment of our Alumnae Office and the appointment of our first Alumnae Secretary.

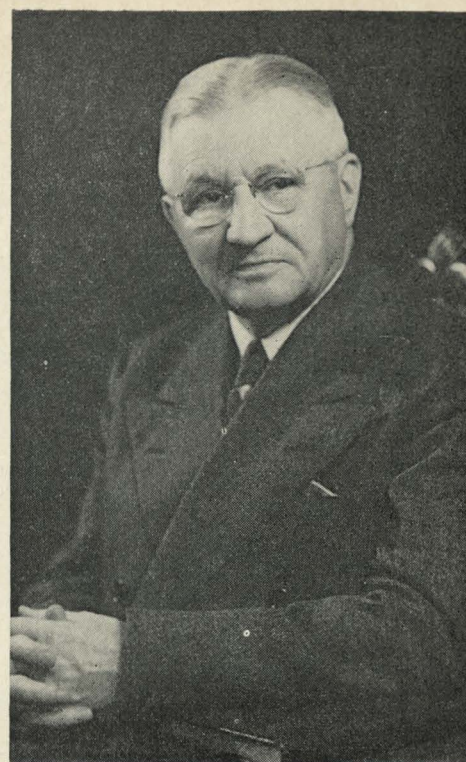

The oil portrait of Dr. Quillian painted by Helena E. Ogden Campbell, hangs in our Alumnae Office as a constant reminder of his "distinguished services and incomparable devotion".

His service to Wesleyan and indeed to Methodism will long be remembered.

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to Nonie Acree Quillian and hope she feels as we do—that on his visit to Wesleyan just a few days before his death, Dr. Quillian realized anew what a special place he will always hold in the hearts of Wesleyan.

When Dr. Quillian retired as acting president, the following appeared in The Alumnae Magazine: "... he and Nonie (Acree) Quillian . . . will still live on the Rivoli campus in the hearts of the faculty members and students they helped and influenced. They are in the hearts of the Alumnae scattered around the world who knew the Quillians at Wesleyan."

These words are equally true today. Dr. Quillian will be missed.

Dr. Quillian

Alumnae Authors

Wesleyan Alumnae are authors of two new books which were published this fall: "Turning World" by Betty Thompson; and "Maribelle's Corner" by Jean (Gibbons) Cowden.

Betty Thompson is a 1947 graduate "cum laude" from Wesleyan and has also done graduate study in literary criticism at Kenyon School of English, Gambier, Ohio. She served as Public Relations Director at Wesleyan for two years following her graduation; worked as a correspondent on "The Macon Telegraph"; was staff writer for the Methodist Board of Missions for five years; and served as Secretary for Publicity in the Geneva office of the World Council of Churches.

"Turning World" is largely a record of the author's experiences and impressions while working in Geneva and

New York and during a recent trip around the world; and gives a penetrating presentation of the ways Christians in many nations are coming together to solve their problems. This book will be used by over two million Protestants during 1960-61 in their study of the mission theme "Into All the World Together."

Jean (Gibbons) Cowden was graduated from Wesleyan in 1946. This is her first book, and it is so delightful that undoubtedly she will achieve success in realizing her literary ambitions. "Maribelle's Corner" is a story for children about a shy and charming little king snake. It is an exciting and colorful tale which provides youngsters with a great deal of knowledge about snake life.

We congratulate both Wesleyan!

ALUMNAE CONTRIBUTE TO LIBRARY ADDITION

Contributions continue to arrive as a result of President Strickland's letter to alumnae in which he outlined the need for enlarging and improving our Candler Memorial Library.

As Dr. Strickland pointed out, the college has outgrown the present facilities and improvements must be made if we are to maintain and strengthen our academic excellence.

Better lighting, added shelving space, more reading and study areas, an added wing, and air conditioning! All of this is urgently needed, and Dr. Strickland is confident the alumnae will "spark" the campaign for funds.

Our response thus far has been gratifying to Dr. Strickland, but we are a long, long way from our goal. A number of us have already shown our interest in a cause which we realize is so important to the future of Wesleyan. Special gifts will be solicited to supplement our giving, but we want to demonstrate to our new president our vital concern for the future of our alma mater.

Any amount will be appreciated. It is not the size of your gift that matters—it is the fact that you care enough about Wesleyan's academic program to give whatever amount you can. Each of us should have a share, however small, in making this library improvement possible. If you have not already sent your contribution, won't you do so now?

Inaugural Address

duate schools. But such comparisons are apt to be definitive only in pointing out some programs that are completely inadequate. Actually, the effectiveness of the work a college does is not likely to be ascertainable for ten, twenty, thirty or more years when it can be seen what has happened in the lives of graduates and to the world through them.

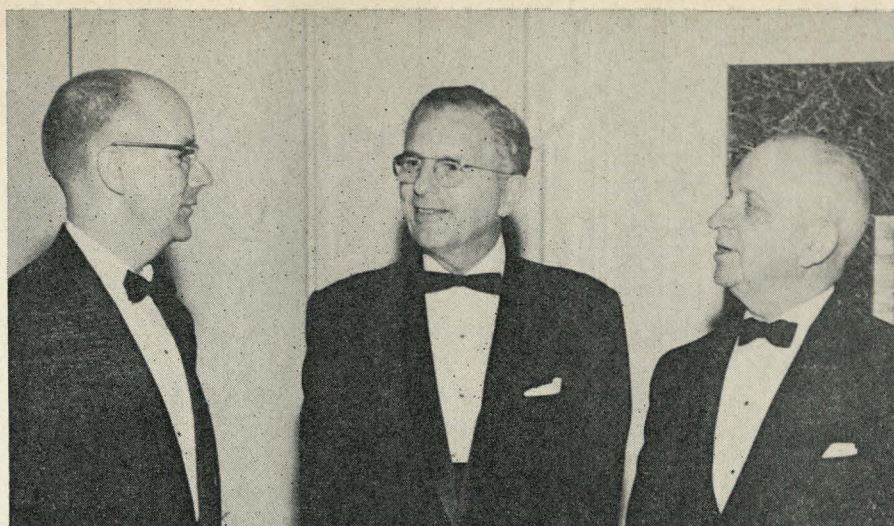

Statistical analysis is useful in college administration, but it cannot define "quality" or "excellence." But on some college campuses an almost undefinable force has been generated that nourishes a thirst for knowledge, that generates an uncompromising devotion to truth, that breeds contempt for shoddy thinking and behaviour, that destroys superstitions and prejudices and life's horizons, and that unshackles the imagination and the faculties of creativity. In the case of some institutions a single individual, a professor or an administrator, because of the depth of his own character, convictions, and concerns has let loose on a campus a transforming spirit of greatness.

As for Wesleyan, again I say that no one here wishes to make extravagant claims. With remarkable persistence, however, Wesleyan has pursued through long years and difficult days the ideal of high quality education. No other aim could suffice in the days ahead.

Christian College

The third ideal that I wish to mention that has been a guiding light at Wesleyan throughout its history is the ideal of a Christian College. Two sentences from the preamble of the By-Laws of Wesleyan College are especially pertinent at this point. The first is: "Wesleyan College . . . is dedicated to the Service of God and the Making of Christian Womanhood." The second is: "Wesleyan College has never been sectarian." The first president of the college, Dr. George F. Pierce, was a Methodist minister and was later elected a bishop of the Church. But included in the first faculty were members of at least three different denominations. And through the years, students from almost every Christian denomination, from the Jewish religion, and even from non-Christian lands have found here a congenial place to live and to study.

A Christian college does not receive its definitive nature by virtue of compulsory chapel attendance, or compulsory Bible courses, or enforced standards of conduct. All of these things have been a part of life at Wesleyan, though the administration and interpretation of them has changed greatly through the years. Customs change, but the fundamental character of a Christian institution does not change.

I should like to suggest that for a college to be truly Christian it must begin where every college worthy of the name "college" begins, at the point of integrity. Where subscribed to, integrity vitally affects every phase of college life. Where there is intellectual integrity there must be genuine search for truth, regardless of consequences. There must be honest and fair appraisal of opposing ideas. Where there is administrative integrity, there must be honesty in dealing with people, business principles and methods that are above reproach, and public relations that are firmly rooted in the truth. Where there is pedagogical integrity there must be no posing in lieu of preparation, no mouthing of platitudes in place of honest thought, no begging the question and evasiveness to protect professorial prejudices.

But a college, to be truly Christian, must go beyond integrity. Its Christian character is found in the fundamental purpose for which it was brought into existence and in pursuance of which it is faithfully administered.

Two Philosophies

Though they may have many ramifications, basically there are only two philosophies of life. The one, by whatever name it goes, is naturalistic, materialistic, non-spiritual. For this philosophy, truth is a description of reality, and reality is the totality of material substance and processes. Man is a highly developed animal who would be wise to govern himself in accordance with natural laws which are descriptions of the seeming orderliness of observable phenomena. Man is a very temporary personality set in the midst of an impersonal universe. The universe seems to function uniformly and with some order, but there is no underlying guarantee either of the unity or the orderliness of the so-called universe.

The other philosophy speaks of truth likewise as a description of reality, but it believes that reality is more than the sum total of material existence. It believes also that man is a highly developed animal, but it sees in the personality of man a reflection of the personality that is the architect of all existence. It believes that man would be wise to govern his conduct in accordance with natural laws, and it defines natural law as a description of the orderly processes of observable phenomena, but it believes the seeming orderliness of the universe is a true orderliness guaranteed by the mind of a Creator. It believes the universe is properly named a universe, for amidst great diversity all existence has a unity in the mind of the Lord of Life.

A Christian college is a college thoroughly committed to the second, the theistic philosophy of life. It is not afraid of objective search for truth, for it believes that truth leads to God. It seeks for truth, not as a quest for ephemeral relationships, but as a means of knowing the underlying purposefulness of life itself. It is committed to the conviction that there are values in life and that the greatest value is in human personality, the image of God on earth. The Christian college proudly acknowledges the kinship of God-fearing scholars and educators who work in secular institutions, but it considers itself to have a unique function in human society by virtue of its fundamental commitment. It believes that a community of scholars and students, having in common a set of life values deriving from the God revealed in the Judaeo-Christian tradition, is superbly equipped to seek knowledge, wisdom, and understanding.

It is to such a conception of a college as I have here spoken of that I this day commit myself in sincere service.

Class Notes

At Commencement this year, the Class of 1910 held their Golden Anniversary Reunion. Esther (Hosch) Crews wrote us a lovely letter of appreciation which we quote in part: "It is a memory that I shall always cherish. The candlelight ceremony was so impressive. Then there was the reception at "Magnolia Hill"—not to mention the delicious meals and hospitable atmosphere. 'Twas so good to see the friends of yesteryear. It's too bad the entire 1910 class could not have been present."

1914

Dr. John B. Cobb, Jr., son of Theodora (Atkinson) Cobb, has been awarded a scholarship grant for the academic year of 1960-61 from the American Association of Theological Schools. He is associate professor of Systematic Theology at the School of Theology, Claremont, California.

1919

Bess (Tappan) Farris, with her husband, made a "flying" trip of 23 days to Moscow, stopping in Scotland for gas only. They were with a very congenial group from Atlanta and had a fine time, but she said home truly looked good.

1921

Marian (Padrick) Woodard has received the Tifton Exchange Club's Golden Deed Award for 1959 "for her church activities, charity work, and contributions to civic betterment." She was cited for her many activities including her interest in foreign students at Abraham Baldwin College, and her support of a Japanese kindergarten.

Mary Lou Barton, who is now serving as president of the Georgia Society of the United States Daughters of 1812, is a candidate without opposition for the office of First Vice-President of the national organization. She is active in civic and club work which currently include the office of secretary of the Macon Wesleyan Alumnae Association.

We extend our deepest sympathy to Susie (Heard) Fleischer in the death of her husband, Major J. M. Fleischer. Susie has come to Macon to live.

1928

Maude (McGehee) Hogg writes that things are quiet in Winter Haven, Florida, "now that the clean-up after hurricane Donna is about over. No one was harmed, however, and for that we are thankful. I have just finished getting my son, Clyde Hamilton, 19, off to his freshman year at Auburn University. And my daughter, Celia, who is 15 is a sophomore in the Winter Haven Senior High School."

1929

Our deepest sympathy goes out to Annette (Richardson) Chappell who lost her eight-week-old grandson, Richard Chappell Evans, in a tragic automobile accident.

1931

Margaret (Boyd) Whitnel, Fulton, Ky., for three years has been secretary of Missionary Personnel in her conference. 1934

Charlotte, daughter of Charlotte (Ty-rus) Dekle was an official delegate from the State of Georgia Y Clubs to the YMCA World Youth Conference held in Amsterdam, Holland, August 3-13. Charlotte was one of two hundred Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y members from the United States to attend the conference. After giving some most interesting experiences on the field, the letter ends with this plea: "We're just so little in the ocean that is Mato Grosso, with its tidal wave of superstition and ignorance, and its often negative and narrow Protestant witness. Pray for the church, and give it the best you have; after all, you're "it.""

Betty Thompson is the author of a recent publication entitled "Turning World." This book will be used by over two million Protestants during 1960-61 in their study of the mission theme "Into All the World Together." Need I say, I resigned and am now a personnel counselor for the employment agency where I applied for employment! Life in the theatre looks up!"
